

COLLABORATORS

RAE thanks the researchers who contributed their experience and wisdom to the service of improving the submitted articles—a voluntary job that is fundamental to the improvement of our texts. Over the past year, we have witnessed the building of numerous partnerships between members of the Scientific Editorial Board, guest scientific editors, authors, and reviewers, enriched by open and frank dialogue on both sides. We highlight the participation of editors from the forum “The business of eating: Entrepreneurship and cultural politics” and thank Professors Jeffrey Pilcher, Krishnendu Ray, Eliane

Brito, and Marina Heck for conducting the editorial processes for the year 2017.

In the previous period—from January to December 2016—we depended on the help of 303 contributors. In the current period—from January to December 2017—the number of contributors was 357, whose names are listed in page 107.

We take this opportunity to honor the members of the Scientific Editorial Board and Reviewers, who were selected as the best editors and reviewers, respectively, of the year. Their contribution was crucial to maintaining the quality of RAE articles. The choice was based on three criteria: the number of evaluations performed, compliance with deadlines for responding to authors, and quality of the evaluation performed.

On average, each scientific editor participated in the preliminary review and follow-up process for 3.5 articles and took 9.39 days to provide their feedback. On average, each reviewers who collaborated on our blind review process in 2016 performed 2.4 reviews and required 18.08 days to complete their feedback. We acknowledge the services provided by the following contributors:
