

Subject: Short papers

The Brazilian Review of Finance now welcomes submissions of short papers. It can be a simple paper reporting a locally relevant result or a novel and interesting descriptive analysis.

The short paper should contain no more than 4 exhibits (tables and figures) and no more than 4,000 words (considering the full paper, from title page to references). It can be either in Portuguese or English.

We will take no longer than 1 month to give authors a response for a short paper submission.

Responses to short paper submissions will be one of the following:

- Accept
- Conditional accept (few comments limited to expositional changes)
- Reject

That is: short papers, short revisions.

A paper submitted as a “short paper” that displays more than 4 exhibits or more than 4,000 words will be returned.

We will continue to accept papers that are not short. However, these papers will go through the usual reviewing process (probably significantly longer).
